As a member of the Health Care Department, Nicole defends health care providers and institutions against medical malpractice and liability claims. Prior to joining Marshall Dennehey, Nicole was the judicial law clerk for the Honorable Lesa S. Gelb of the Luzerne County Court of Common Pleas. During her time with Judge Gelb, Nicole assisted in drafting various opinions on a variety of civil litigation matters, including medical malpractice, personal injury, real property and mortgage foreclosure actions.

During law school, Nicole was an intern for the Honorable Malachy E. Mannion of the Middle District of Pennsylvania as part of Drexel University's Co-Op Program. When deciding where to complete her co-op, Nicole knew that she wanted to return home to Scranton, Pennsylvania, and join the area's robust legal community.

Nicole's prior work experience has enabled her to gain valuable understanding of many complex civil litigation matter types and resulted in the development of strong legal research and writing skills.
