Carolyn is a shareholder and the Managing Attorney of Marshall Dennehey's Philadelphia headquarters, where she oversees the office's operations, strategic initiatives, and day-to-day management of its 130 attorneys. A member of the firm's Casualty Department, she also serves as supervisor of the office's asbestos litigation and manages a diverse practice including asbestos, premises liability and auto liability matters.

With almost 20 years of litigation and trial experience, Carolyn has defended private homeowners, homeowners associations and retail owners, to name a few, in premises liability matters that range from slip and falls to catastrophic personal injury cases. Additionally, she routinely handles personal injury matters related to auto liability.

Carolyn's client-centric practice focuses on communication, building trusting relationships, and listening to uncover pain points and initiate a thoughtful, strategic plan for a solution.

She graduated from Ursinus College in 2000 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Biology, and a minor in Sociology. Her background as a health physicist, and early years working at Merck & Co., provide an edge and unique perspective when handling cases involving asbestos and toxic tort litigation.
