Fort Lauderdale – 954.233.5838

Narriman is a seasoned attorney with more than 10 years of diversified legal experience. She provides strategic counsel and litigation representation across a broad range of civil and insurance-related matters such as automobile personal injury, premises liability, construction defects, toxic torts, property damage, and general negligence matters. Narriman has developed deep expertise in case management, risk assessment, contract interpretation, and regulatory compliance, and is known for her ability to guide clients through complex disputes with clear communication and practical legal strategy. Throughout her career, she has handled all aspects of civil litigation from inception through trial, including depositions, arbitrations, mediations, and motion practice.

Her previous experience includes extensive work in New York State Labor Law, OSHA-related issues, workers' compensation matters, and construction and commercial litigation. Narriman advised a wide range of clients, including property owners, business entities, managing agents, sureties, and insurance companies, developing tailored litigation strategies designed to assess exposure and minimize risk. As part of her practice she analyzed complex contractual arrangements, including construction management agreements, master service agreements, general liability policies, certificates of insurance, and risk transfer provisions.

As in-house counsel with an insurance carrier, Narriman provided general litigation counsel on a wide range of matters, guiding cases toward negotiated resolution or trial. She supported the company's no-fault litigation and arbitration unit, assisting with case management and post-hearing submissions, and advised litigation teams on provider compliance issues related to licensing and corporate structure in defense of fraudulent claims.

Narriman received her juris doctor from Hofstra University School of Law in 2012 and her Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from New York University, where she completed a minor in Law and Society and Computer Science.
