

Noriel L. Sta. Maria, M.D.

Special Counsel

NLStamaria@mdwccg.com

Long Island, NY – Melville – 631.227.6330

Noriel is a member of the Casualty Department. After receiving his M.D., Noriel pursued his juris doctor to apply his knowledge of the medical field to the practice of law. Noriel uses his medical training and education in the defense of cases where in-depth knowledge of medicine is an integral component of the defense. He has also represented physicians in matters involving licensure and negligence.

Noriel graduated from SUNY Downstate School of Medicine, earning his M.D. in 1992. After a brief but intensive period practicing medicine, he went on to obtain his juris doctor from the Fordham University School of Law in 1999. Noriel began his legal career in the area of medical malpractice defense and then went on to a firm that represented physicians before New York's Office of Professional Medical Conduct.

Education

- Fordham University School of Law (J.D., 1999)
- SUNY Downstate School of Medicine (M.D., 1992)

Admissions

- New York, 2000

Significant Representative Matters

- During his tenure in medical malpractice defense, Noriel won summary judgment on behalf of a physician who was alleged to have caused a burn injury from a surgical lamp. On Noriel's papers, the Court ruled that the matter sounded in medical malpractice, not simple negligence, and dismissed the case for failing to file within the appropriate statute of limitations. Plaintiff's counsel did not file an appeal.
- In a physician discipline case where a physician's medical license was at risk of suspension because of the physician's role during a cardiac arrest ("a Code"), Noriel prepared a medical defense which included demonstrating the physician's

Practices

- Asbestos & Mass Tort Litigation
- Environmental & Toxic Tort Litigation

competence in Advanced Cardiac Life Support, dissecting the fast-paced and hectic events of the Code to determine that in each step of the Code, the physician observed the standard of medical care and preparing the physician-client to face an in-person inquiry before the licensing authority. The physician's license was maintained.